Major weekend; Fulenchek drafted 66th overall by Prior to Thursday, the biggest Atlanta Braves thing to happen to the Howe

Atlanta Braves manager Fredi González has never had a kid that grew up chanting that he was rough, tough, can't get enough. But that's the exact attitude that Howe's favorite son, Garrett Fulenchek, used to work himself in to the position to be the 66th overall draft pick in the 2014 Major League Baseball First-Year Player Draft.

of Howe, awaited anxiously Thursday evening on a call. He and his pitching mentor Craig Rose were on their phones constantly and nervously fumbling through texts. When the first round ended, the tall strapping right-hander was approaching an internal nervous battle. Fulenchek was initially ranked by the MLB Network as the 57th slotted player in the draft, continued on Page #2 everyone knew that "Catfish" had, was a powerful left-handed arm.

He didn't always have the lefthanded launching pad. He was what one would call a latebloomer. Somewhere late in the season of 1991, he heaved a missile from deep right field that was waist high to the third baseman. At that moment, all realized that Fulenchek had a cannon

What "Catfish's" son Garrett Fulenchek has compared to his father is enormous size to go along with his cannon of an arm. What scouts like is a big strong kid who can carry the load. They often overlook kids that are under 6 foot 2.

Before Thursday, I would always claim that the leader of that 1992 team, Chris Garner, was the best player to ever come out of Howe. There may still be an argument, but the results are in and the Atlanta Braves say that Garrett Fulenchek is the best player to ever come out of Howe.

I'm so happy for my former teammate and friend "Catfish" and his son Garrett.

Fulenchek:

"I want to thank everyone who has supported me throughout the many years of playing baseball. This week has been a dream come true. Being drafted by the Atlanta Braves has opened the door to the next chapter of my life, but there is a long road ahead. Today, I turn 18 and graduate from Howe High School with all of my friends and classmates. I want to thank the people of Howe who have supported me and my family the whole way. Also, I want to thank the Atlanta Braves for giving me the opportunity to continue my dream. But most of all, my thanks goes to The Lord who has blessed me with this gift." - however, 57 came and went. The first round of the draft took an enormous amount of time with four minutes between each pick (due to television commercials sales and promotion), but the second round flew by with picks coming every one minute. And that's when things got crazy. Longtime Atlanta Brave Ralph Garr came to the podium and cited the following words that forever changed Garrett Fulenchek and Howe, Texas.

"With the 66th selection of the 2014 First-Year Draft, the Atlanta Braves select Garrett Fulenchek of Howe High School of Howe, Texas."

In his first interview as a professional baseball player, Fulenchek spoke of happiness.

"My dream finally came true. I finally got drafted." said Fulenchek. When asked about what he thought about the Braves organization, he said, "I'm honored to be in their organization."

Fulenchek had his entire family of Fulencheks, Lillys, Powells, and Messicks onhand for the family event that they will never forget. The party was at Fulenchek's home on Enloe Road and as one would make the drive past the rows and rows of corn to get to the house, one could only imagine the stories that might one day be told of the big kid from a tiny town who made it to "the show."

Fulenchek's father James Fulenchek was also a Howe Bulldog baseball player. He was the right-fielder on the 1992 Howe team that was ranked #1 in the state for the vast majority of the season by entering the playoffs with a record of 27-2. Up until Thursday night, that was the biggest thing to ever happen to Howe's baseball program.

"I'm an instant Braves fan and I'm so proud for him." said the older Fulenchek.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported that Braves scouting director Tony DeMacio said the power pitching right-hander has long been under the watchful eye of Braves area scout Gerald Turner.

Turner is the same scout who signed Braves shortstop Andrelton Simmons, a second round pick from Curacao by way of Western Oklahoma State, and Evan Gattis, the 23rd round pick from Forney, TX, who became one of baseball's most remarkable success stories last season.

"You can't get anything by Gerald out in Texas," DeMacio said.

Fulenchek had graduation practice the following day on Friday and graduated from Howe High School on Saturday afternoon. Fulenchek also turned 18 on Saturday to officially make it the worlds greatest birthday weekend.

The slot amount for the Braves to sign the 66th pick was $860,000, but it was confirmed that Fulenchek received $1 million and will receive eight semesters of college tuition at Dallas Baptist University under the college scholarship plan. He will sign his contract on Tuesday and fly to Florida on Wednesday to start his professional career.

Leon Thornhill's 40 year investment pays off for Bulldogs

Joan and Leon Thornhill stand in front of the property that they sold to Howe ISD for the expansion of the athletic complex.

An investment made over forty years Thornhill that they were interested ago paid off for Leon Thornhill and the community of Howe.

The Thornhills purchased ten acres of a 59 acre tract from the Patterson family which was located directly behind their house on north Denny Street and just north of Bulldog Stadium and the athletic complex. Their property was just over the right field wall of the baseball park.

"I bought ten acres back then because that's all I could afford at the time. I bought it just to buy it because it was right behind my house." says Leon Thornhill. "I always told everybody that if I got ready to sell it, I'd give the school the first option to buy it."

In late March of this year, Thornhill received a phone call from Superintendent Kevin Wilson who told him that Howe ISD was thinking about buying his property.

Thornhill had the land appraised last year and he gave Wilson a copy of the appraisal that showed the value and it was taken to the Board of Trustees of Howe ISD in April. Two weeks later, Wilson informed in making the purchase and wanted to know what it would cost to make the purchase.

Not revealing the total cost, Thornhill says that he offered the property to the school well under appraised value and it was closed on May 22 of this year.

"It wasn't two weeks later, they were moving dirt." says Thornhill. And they've been moving dirt ever since."

There are two barns that the Thornhills will still maintain until they are no longer on the property. The land that houses the two barns has actually already been deeded to the school.

Thornhill moved to Howe in 1960 and married his wife Joan in the same year. It didn't take him long to get active with the school considering the couple had four children in school. He was elected to the Howe Board of Trustees in April of 1967 and served 12 years until his children had all graduated from Howe.

He also served in numerous ways

"I carried the chains on the sidelines. The older my kids got, I got to carry the down box. Norman Joan Thornhill talked how Dickey (who was head coach then) would like for me to have the down on behind their house. She box so I could help him out and give mentioned that the best part is that him hand signals about how far he needed to get for a first down." Thornhill remembered.

He also spent time as the "Voice of Bulldog Stadium" starting in 1982 and spent 30 years in that role at varsity home football games for Howe.

Thornhill worked 18 years for IBM in Sherman and later worked 18 years for Oscar Mayer in Sherman. While visiting with he and Joan, she in 1954 and is celebrating their quickly pointed out that she's been his boss for the last 20 years during his retirment

One of Leon's best memories of serving on the school board came when they built the state of the art gymnasium in 1968 with the suspended floor. That gym is knows as Charles R. Thompson Gymnasium at the middle school.

Leon Thornhill grew up a Sherman Bearcat and graduated from there 60th class reunion this summer. While asking him if he was still a Bearcat or a Bulldog, he quickly remarked that he was a Bulldog. And piping in was Joan who said said he was Bulldog "all the way to the bone."

Joan even told Leon that when he dies, they're going to put him in a black and white jersey and a Bulldog hat and a microphone in his hand.

"I'm an ex-Bearcat and I went to one of their games last year. They lost. It seems like every time I go to one of their games, they lose. Thornhill said. "Now that I'm not announcing anymore, I may go see a couple of their games this year. I'll still make three of four home games for Howe."

While strolling out the back door to take a picture of the couple married for 54 years, they started walking towards their old land holding hands just as newlyweds would. The Thornhills are a reminder of a different generation of people who come from a different time.

Thornhill spends much of his time in scripture and can be seen each Tuesday night at Howe First Baptist Church's men's Bible Study helping younger and newer Christians with their walk and just to serve as a mentor.

The definition of character is the mental and moral qualities distinctive to an individual.

Because Leon Thornhill put the school ahead of his own personal wealth, kids of Howe ISD will play ball on his land for years and years to come.

Cooper, Fagala, Thornhill Named To School Board

Named to school board posts in voting last Saturday were incumbent R. W. Cooper, Leon Thornhill and Robert Fagala.

Thornhill led the ballot of seven with a total of 148 of the 188 votes cast.

Former Howe student and singer graduates from Booker T. Washington

Hannah Savage

Howe schools gave Hannah Savage her start and a foundation of support to start reaching her dreams.

She was a little girl that loved to sing. Raised by her mother, Kathleen Savage Todd, the owner of The School Zone Academy in Howe, she started in Howe and made her way all over the country with her vocal talents.

Her first singing experience outside of Howe was in Branson, Missouri working two shows a day under Yakov Smirnoff, the famous Russian comedian. She sang in front of approximately 2,500 people per day for two years. She claims that her confidence came from Howe and the support from the community including people like Ray Bledsoe.

Her mother said, "In my business, in early child development, that's what's important. It's taking these young children and saying, 'what can you do and you can do better than anyone else.?' And then build that child."

Coming back from Branson, she auditioned for Dallas ISD's nationally known Booker T. Washington High School for the Performing and Visual Arts with 900 students. Out of the 900, they selected 88 students for the freshman class. Out of those 88, they selected six in their music department and Savage was one of them.

In the interview, they asked her where she studied and learned and her answer was simply, Howe, Texas.

In all actuality, it was Hugh Moody of Austin College that first gave her I ws going to get everyone of them formal training at a very young age. She learned from Moody to sing bel canto which is a style of Italian opera.

By age eight, Savage was singing operas in Italian. Because of that training for Moody, she used that form and style to get in to Booker T. Washington.

What she became more interested in was the jazz ensemble and joined mother rented an apartment in her sophomore year. It was in her junior year that they were invite to sing at the Montreux Jazz Festival in California and won first in the nation.

When Harry Connick, Jr. visited Booker T. Washington, Savage was assigned to him to be his senior guide throughout the school.

A jazz singer, she has sang at the House of Blues and even in Tennessee with Louise Mandrell. She actually got her start by auditioning for the next Shirley Temple at Disney World at age five. Being too young to read, at age five, she wasn't selected, but did get tobe there that summer with a "princess pass."

"Hannah is very humble and I know and everybody knows that it's because she lived in Howe. She has never lost that. She always knows that she's not too big for those britches. And if she thinks she is, she's got a brother and three sisters that will put her in her place." says her mother.

Her siblings are Halona, Haley, Halsey, and Haleen. Each sibling made huge sacrifices for the baby of the family and packed up and moved to Branson and left Howe for the unknown.

"When I had all of these kids, I said graduated whatever I had to do. I came from a family of five children and I was the only one who graduated high school." said Todd Todd opened The School Zone Academy in 1985, but sold in in 2003 to move Hannah to Branson. Upon their return, she bought the school back in 2005.

Having to be a Dallas resident, her Dallas and commuted to Howe daily for Savage to be able to attend schools.

It was a performing ceremony at her graduation at the Myerson Symphony Center in Dallas last Savage will attend Texas Women's University in the fall to get a dual degree in music and therapy. Her goal is to be a music therapist. She wants to help autistic children by way of music therapy. Helping and nurturing kids is a family business.

"My dear friends, you should be quick to listen and slow to speak or to get angry. If you are angry, you cannot do any of the good things that God wants done. Stop doing immoral or evil, instead be humble and accept the message that is planted in you to save you." James 1:19-20. James wrote a general letter to Christian everywhere and it everything you do if you obey and is certainly relevant for us today. Notice he is talking about our temper in one sentence then warns us to stay clear of evil and immorality the next. How are we to are. The older I get the more stay clear of evil? "Instead be humble and be a doer of the message that saves us." Humility is mirror to but my makeup on I see power. Jesus was humble in His response to the crowd yelling and accusing Him. Jesus stayed on the cross for us with power and self control. That is humility. Pride will take you far away from God and will lead you to arrogance and sin. Mark 9:35, "If anyone desires to be first, he shall be last and servant of all." Be willing to park the farthest, be the last in line, be the unsung hero and work behind the scenes take the smallest slice of pizza and pass when there is not enough. Humility will not gain at the expense of others and the Lord will promote the humble and allow pride to fall.

"Obey God's message! Don't fool yourselves by just listening to it. If you hear the message and don't obey it, you are like people who stare at themselves in a mirror and forget what they look like as soon as they leave. Don't ever stop looking at the perfect law that sets you free. God will bless you in don't just hear and forget." James 1:22-25. Bid goes to Metal Masters for completion of press box and field house

Roger Brown of Metal Masters and Kent Akins of Akins Construction.

In a called Board of Trustees meeting in order to decide on bids to complete the athletic complex, the board considered two bids that were submitted on Friday morning that opened at 11am. The jobs were for the interior completion of the new field house, remodel of the existing field house and removal of the old press box and the building of a new one.

One bid was submitted by Fountaine Construction, who submitted a bid for the new field house completion of $119,257 and remodel of the existing field house of $71,218. They did not submit a bid for the press box.

Metal Masters, which is owned by 1992 Howe graduate Roger Brown submitted for completion of the new field house for $97,400 and remodel of the existing field house of $69,300. A press box removal and completion bid was sent for $64,600. This came to a total of $231,300. Brown will sub-contract a portion of the job to Akins Construction owned by Kent Akins, who is also a Howe graduate.

Superintendent Kevin Wilson told the board that these amounts were a little higher than they had hoped for, but while going through the process twice, he recomended approval of the bid of Metal Masters based on time considerations, the full construction job and the amount bid. The board approved the motion with none opposed. Pat Stewart made the motion and Clint Catching seconded it.

The school opened for bid last month and only received one bid, which was for $300,000 by Shawn Stephenson Construction. The board denied the bid and went in a different direction receiving a maximum expenditure offer of $300,000.

The school had budgeted for the project to be in the neighborhood of $150,000, but says that they can reduce the cost of the winning bid of $231,300 by reusing equipment that came out of the old field house that was torn down. Toilets, urinals and showerheads were all less than a year old in the old field house. Those have been stored and kept to be re-used to save tax payer dollars.

"I think this is a fair bid based on the process we've gone through. We missed it on the $150,000 but I still want to get as close to that as possible by doing some of the modifications." said Wilson.

The toilets that the architect used will be downgraded and other specifics such as reducing the number of bathrooms and showers and demolishing less concrete in the existing field house as the initial plans called for. These reductions can get the cost closer to $200,000 for the entire project minus what is already taking place by Shawn Stephenson Construction.

Wilson says overall the project is doing well budget -wise. They bid 8,000 tons of rock and will be below 7,000. That is a savings of around $20,000. He said that none of the other bids should be over budget.

A discussion of re-bidding was quickly halted because of the time restraint.

Another bidding would take another two weeks away from time of construction. The first football activity for Bulldog Stadium is scheduled for August 21 with a scrimmage vs. Paris Chisum.

Roger Brown said that he plans on starting on the project Monday morning by the time this edition publishes. He will have the insurance submitted to the school and will start with the construction of the existing field house bathrooms.

The existing field house had two separate public restrooms for male and females. That field house will now have exclusivly men's public restrooms while the new field house will have exclusively women's public restrooms.

The press box will be constructed at the home of Roger Brown and will be lifted in to place with a crane.

"Kent (Akins) is going to be in on it with me and he's going to be the subcontractor for me and he's going to do a lot. He's going to be doing one thing while I'm doing another so we can tag team and get it done.

It was Kent Akins' father Murray Akins who constructed the previous field house in 1966 that was recently removed.

The removal of that field house was contracted to Shawn Stephenson Construction in May. With the purchase of the property previously owned by Leon Thornhill, the school decided to upgrade the athletic complex by adding a softball field, upgrading parking, removing the old field house, constructing a new field house and constructing a new press box. All of the work excluding this latest bid is currently being done by Stephenson.

With Brown, Akins and Stephenson involved with the project, it shows that Howe is loyal to it's own graduates. All three were graduates of Howe. Kent Akins was in the Class of 1983, Shawn Stephenson graduated in 1991 while Roger Brown was a 1992 Howe graduate.
